CHAPTER J.

It had been a day of oppressive heat, even in Newport, with searce air enough astir to have lifted a lady's curl. But as the night came on, casting its shadows far and wide over the parched meadows and drooping flowers, gradually the sca-breese stole up from the blue Atlantie, whispering its love for the languid earth.

It was a glorious night, late in the summer of 18-, and all Newport was alive with preparations for the grand Pucy ball to come off that night at the --- House.

Innumerable lights flashed from chamber windows, and quick, eager voices told of the wildering excitement of many a fair one's thoughts, as the grand toil t of the season was made.

The evening was wearing away, and still the simple crowd continued to deposit, at the entrance of the hotel, gor geously dressed sovereigns of the night, fairy-like flower girls, and stately lords, and warrior knights. Far and wide thashed one gleam of light from the illuminated building, while the very boughs of the trees danced many a fanusstic polka, and gay quadrille, as if inspired by the rich music gushing out from every open casement, mingling with the odor of the sca-breeze the fragrance of the flowers.

One light form lingered near the threshold of the ladies' drawing room, a girl of, some ten years, with cheeks too pale, eyes too sad for buoyant childhood. She was dressed very simply, with no ornament, save her own dark curls clustering about the white forehead and inlugling with the white folds of her dress. Full of childish admiration, her glance was wandering over the gry crowd passing onward to the ballroom. For an instant her eye would rest wonderingly upon some glittering costume, but the next turn impatiently aside, and then as she caught the passing smile of some lovely being, her own young face would grow sud-Long Sybil Conyers looked upon the gay procession until her bead grew dizzy with the light and gaiety, and her breath came faint in the perfumed air, then with a slow, weary step she passed out upon a balcony ; it was already occupied, but she was not aware of it until she stood close by the side of a tall figure, in the garb of a pollar ; for a moment she drew back dialfin four, but the next she stood fearless and quiet by his side, looking up into his lace. It was a fine, manly countenance, the nose somewhat prominent, the eyes very blue, and as the child looked upon them, full of dreamy thought-but that was not their usual expression, as she looked upon them long afterwards and learnt the mouth was small as woman's -the smile that lingered there would have been feminine in its beauty and attchery, had it not been for the slight compression of the lips, the broad, high brow, and the almost haughty carriage

Now Sybil had an affection for all pudlars, born in the solitude of long visits at Grandmother's, in the country, where?the arrival of the pedlar and his pack were hailed with irrepressible delight, from the very watch dog, who sent forth his note of welcome, to his pack, to inspect his wares and see if he had brought her anything very line. But, child as she was, she noted that every gesture of the one before herwas graceful, and full of an almost indescribable eas: and dignity, rarely seen in the Yankee pediar. And, evon when the pediar himself questioned her why she was there thus sontary, when all was light and merriment within, she answered timidly that she loved to come out in the evening and watch the bright stars. Then he laid his hand gently upon her young head, nalled her a little dreamer, and asked whether she loved flowers also; and the girl answered engerly:

" Dearly, sir, dearly."

So he placed a spray of white blossoms within her hand, asking her name. "Sybil; and yours, sir l' she said aniv ly.

" Harry, my field formal "

O Harry ?" she repeated. " it is a sweet name, I shall always love it. "

Alas! Sybil Convers-(Continued to matrow.)

HEROINES OF THE MISSIGNARY ESTEReass: or Sketches of Prominent Female Missionaries. By Daniel C. Eddy, Boston : Tickner, Reed, and Fields, 1850.

We are indepted to the publishers for a capy of this interesting work. It contains graphic and well-written sketches of thirteen women who have devoted or are devoting their lives for the salvation of the heathen. Among them we notice a Newell, a Stewart, and three wives of the de-roted Judson. The first Missionaries to heathen lands from this country were Messrs, Judson, Newell, Nott and Mills, who sailed for the scene of their labora in February, 1812. Judson and Newell took their wives with them. Since that time others have gone, most of whom have paid the great penalty, after having worm thu christian Missispary armor for a short time only. Many are familiar with the characters of these most estimable women; such will find this volume of the highest interest. Those who are not acquainted with the lives of these female followers of the Cross should read this book, for they will here learn valuable lessons which they cannot soon forget. When we see a woman who has been reared in comfortable and sumptimes affluent circumstances, who has been highly educated, and who might have occupied a conspicuous position in the fashinnable world, - when we see such an one abandoning all the sacred associations of home, severing the hallowed ties of relationship, turning away from the world and all its follies, -and devoting her life to the cause, of which Christ came as the great Missionary,-and going into far-distant lands, to suffer all manner of privations, with the certain knowledge of early filling a lonely grave,-we cannot but venerale her character, and admire her noble devotion to God and His great work of Redemption.

man of the world, who is the heroine of a ball-room, with a Newell or a Judson; the one is the ridiculous butterfly of a brief passing moment, admired for her excessive folly, and elistinguished for all manner of weaknesses, which fashion commends and the world applands. The others are the strong-minded, determined, devoted heroines in a work which ranks next to the Mediatorial sacrifice. They are devoting their lives for the welfare of ignorant nations, in a far-off land, where the breath of applanse soldom greets their cars or cheers their hearts. Their lives are those of suffering now, but their voluntary martyrdom on earth will earn for them the highest joy of heaven, the fullest approbation of Him who will finally sit upon the throne, as the unyielding judge of the whole earth.

Among the sketches of this rolume will by found an exceedingly interesting one of "Fanny Forcester," the present Mrs. Judsun. We commend the book to all clusses of readers, for we know that it cannot fail to please them; especially do we ask all women to read it, for there they will find records of the greatness and goodness of those of their own sex who have made their names immortal on earth.

The volume is beautifully printed, in the best style of the art, and is worthy of the reputation of its enterprising publishers. -For sale, in this town, by C. Il. Hammett, K∆Mr. Webster arrived at the Revere House, in Boston, Monday afternoon; un grandmother, who would lay aside her immense concourse assembled on the oceaknitting as the pedlar came round with sion. Ho was welcomed home by Henjamin R. Curtis, Esq., in an elequent speech which was responded to by Mr. Webster in appropriate terms. He spoke about 20 minutes.

As he entered the hotel, the band on the balcony, played on inspiriting air. Mr. Webster afterwards appeared at the wiadow of an upper apartment, and was again greeted by the growth, to whom he howed his grantude.

STANZAS AT CERRO GORDO.

BY MAJOR G. W. PATTEN, U. S. ARMY. It was night at Cerro Gordo. During the action of this afternuon the Mexicans had been only partially defeated, and their bugles, breathing defiance, yet cang in the distance. One of the heights had been stormed by the division of General Twiggs, which lay resting upon its arms, welting for daylight in order to renew its attack on the hostile batteries. Occasionally, through the night, a random shot from the entmy can e croshing and crackling through the foliage which shadowed the American lines, where a thick drizzling mist swept eyer the faces and figures of the exhausted soldiery. It was under these circumstances, by the dim glimmer of a watch-fire, and on the blank page of an epistolery doc ument which was accidentally lodged in the forage cap of the author, that the original of the subjoined transcript was pencill-

Oh! let us skep awhile to night, Our weary limbs with tail are sore, Tunes row's days renews the fight Beyond-and we may rare to have Remail: the tropics' burning ray Paintage the hearts 'mid strife which dare
And hands strong ners'd to neet the fray
Droop listless 'mid the usbryair. Oh ! give us slorp—a wakeful rest,

A dream which breaks ere scarce begon, -And then our arm shall do its best To strike until the field be won; With become fired by martial glow, And purpose for the combat tipe, Our strength renewed shall proudly show The glory of the star and stripe.

Oh! give us skeep—'tis toil severe Which hids one voice the neuch restrain, Let us recline till marning here And see in dreams our homes again; Whose homes, also ! for -for away

Where now 'mid tears with trembling tought For us the nightly prayer they say, For us the verper hyann is song.

Yes the cus skep-no downy bed Nor pillow soft our limbs demand, We only ask to key our head And the count the drifted sand: The night is divor, the song of cheer
Which glads our houses is far away, morrow brings the strife of fear-Oh! krussleep till dawn of day.

Our readers will please have the kindess to imagine what is said in the first paragraph of the following letter from a New-York correspondent, a piece of fun:-

NEW YORK, April 29, 1850. In strolling up Broadway the other day, I saw a crowd of people around a window and my curiosity baing excited, I joined Altraching so much allention. After hearing various exclamations, such as " how hountiful," " how well executed," and what a fine looking man," &c., I sucecoded in getting a glimpso of the object attracting so much attention, when, lo and hehold, there was a life-like likeness of W. Henry Cranston, Esqr., Editor of that popular paper, the Newport Daily News. It was executed on paper and with such a transfulness of expression that I could not but recognise it at once. Their were many enquiries as to who was the original, and I was the only one among the crowd who could claim a knowledge of the individual. l koju my knowieżge to myself, my owa natural diffidence, and the known modesty of Mr. C. prompting me to do so. On Saturday the steamer Atlantic left for the old world. She carries out a goodly number of passengers. The Atlantic being detained helow by the fog, the Chagres steamer Ohio (a crack ship) Jassed her and got about two miles blead, when the Atlantic gave chose and when at Sandy Hook, the Atlantic had passed the Ohio and crossed her how. The Ohio hauled down her colours and fired a gun to Iceward, thus acknowledging the superiority of the A. Bets are made that the trip will be performed to Liverpool inside of ten

There has been a succession of fatal accidents happening this morning. At first the walls of some buildings in Front and Water structs, where there was a fire some days ago, tumbled down barying some fifteen or tweaty persons beneath the ruins.

so badly injured they cannot live long. The walls of the old Chemical Bank building in Broadway, adjoining the American Museum, fell this morning, also covering many under the roms. They have recovered seven bodies, and many more are said to be still underneath.

And as if that were not enough, for one forenoon, the steam boat Princeton must tun down a beat from the Swedish sloop of war, containing a number of persons officers and incu. A part was drowned, how many I could not learn.

We are having some pretty respectable kind of weather just now, and hopes are entertained that it will continue for a spell. I see by the papers (of course it must be so) that Gen. Taylor's family are to be in Newport this summer. Pretty good for old Zack. I hope he will make our rulers at Washington behave themselves, and admit Culifornia as a State before he goes, Yours, de. THE FOLLY OF PRIDE.—The witty and sarcastic Rev. Synney Smith, for many years one of the contributors to the great English reviews thus discourseth on the folly of pride in such a creature as man :

" After all, take some quiet, soher moment of life, and add togethe: the two ideas of pride and of man. Behold him, creature of a span high, stalking through infinite space in all the grandeur of littleness. Perched on a speck of the universe, every wind of heaven strikes into his blood the They are now at work digging the bodies coldness of death; his soul floats from out, most of those taken out are dead, or his body like melody from the string; day and night, as the dust on the wheel he is rolled along the heavens through a labyrinth of worlds, and all beneat). the creature of God are flaming above and beneath. Is this a creature to make himself a crown of glory; te deny his own flesh, to mock at his fellow, sprung from that dust to which both will soon return? Does he not suffer? Does he not die ! When he reasons is he never stopped by difficult ties? When he acts is he never tempted by pleasure? When he lives is he free frem pain? When he dies enhe escape the common grave ? Pride is not the heritage of man; humility should dwell with frailty, and atone for ignorance, error, and imperfection."

HOW easy it is, and still more silly, for a person to sit down and write an advertisement praising every or any article that they may happen to have to sell, and tunning down that of their meighbors, which they know to be quite as good as their new, and, in many cares, better. But such is characteristic of the age we live in. But the public has been so gas-ed up of late, with these flaming, bombistic advertisements, that they now know just what weight to attack to them. We believe that advertising, when not abused, to be a benefit to all; but, like many other things, it must be overdone with

Among those we consider worthy of motion is the German Bitters, invented by Dr. Hood and, and prepared by Dr. Jackson, in Philadelphia. One instance in particular, in which the superior victors of this medicine has been tested, has fallen under our observation. During the strength of the country, was very seriously afflicted with Liver Complaint, and after trying in vain various remedice, he purchased a bottle of the Bitters, and after thing if, was so much reliaved of this distressing mataly, that he provised another bottle, and is resistered entirely to health."

"It is very reldom that we make any altasion to Patent Medicines, either approving or otherwise. Unfortunately for the country, and for honest and consciousless inventors and venders of three medicines, the least is becoming thooded with quark preparations, that are made alone for profit, and are lift not even for the dags. In this state of things it is hand to tell which are, and which are not worth having. If a proceed gets an indifferent medicine the first time by purchasely, he is very apt to condema the whole of them and buy no more, and interatoratmust only blame those of their number, (the ignorandy combine plain medicines together for the purpose of making amoney.) for the ill success which attends the efforts of the deserving."

Judge M. M. Nords said, in his "Weykly Messenger," Jamen y 6, 1850,

"The Hoff nut's Genome Bitters,—Here is a preparation which the leading presses in the Union appear to be manimum in remnancing, and the reason is obvious. It is made after a preparation which the leading presses in the Union furnished by one of the nost cell-braied physicians of modern times—the late Dr. Christopher Wilhelm Hundlard, parks or nothe University of Jean, private physician to the hieg of Pursia, and one of the greatest medical writers Gennany has ever produced. He was emplettically the enemy of hundrag, and therefore a medicine of which he was the inventer and embrace may be confidently relied on. He specially remananced it in Liver Complaint, Despeta, Indexilie, Vertigo, Acidity of the Stouwch, Constipation, and all complaints arising from a dismeterations. Nine Philadelphia papers express their convention of its excellance, and several of the editors speak of its effects from their own individual experience. Under these irremanances, we feel warranted, not only in calling the attention of our reads at the present proprietor's (Dr. C. M. Jackson's) preparation, but in recommending the article to all afflected."
